Death cited by Right to Life group

Death of an 18-year-old married woman was cited here today by Right to Life spokesmen assailing operation of abortion clinics in Illinois. The inquest verdict Friday was accidental death.

Mrs. Barbara Lee Davis of Cutler, Ill., died June 14 after undergoing an abortion that day at the Hope Clinic for Women, 602 Twenty-first St., Granite City.

An autopsy report Friday showed she was 14 to 16 weeks pregnant at the time. An affidavit submitted by Dr. Hector Zavallos, Hope medical director, indicated she was 11 weeks pregnant.

Illinois law limits abortions after 12 weeks of pregnancy to hospital inpatients. The clinic describes itself as an outpatient surgical center offering abortions, pregnancy testing, birth control information and services meeting the physical and emotional needs of women. Today's press conference, held in the fifth floor conference room of St. Elizabeth Hospital, Granite City, was called to discuss details of the inquest held Friday night at the Perry County Courthouse, Pincneyville.

Mrs. Joan Themm, mother of Mrs. Davis, was quoted as saying she is filing suit charging negligence by the Hope Clinic after the performance of an abortion.

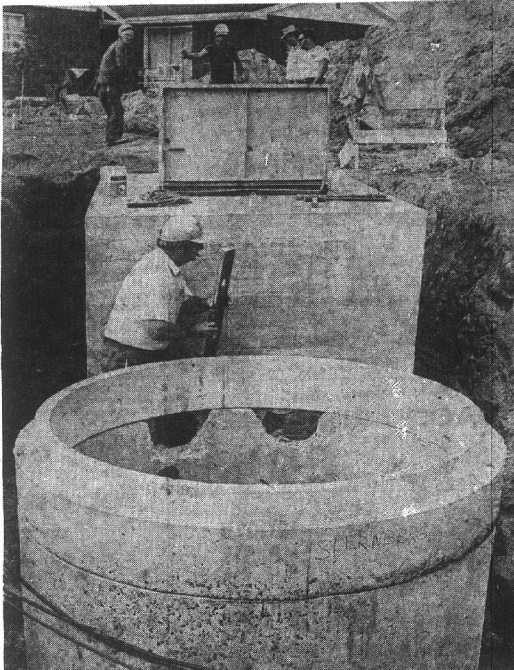

Representing the Illinois Federation for Right to Life at the news conference was Mrs. Felicia Goeken of Alton, president of that group and secretary of the National Right of Life Committee, Washington, D.C.

Also attending was John A. Bock Jr., a lawyer with Bock and Stengler, Belleville.

The affidavit by the Hope medical director said Mrs. Davis arrived at the clinic at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, June 14, and left at 1:35 p.m. with normal blood pressure and vital signs. She died several hours later before being taken to Pincneyville Community Hospital. The autopsy showed blood loss and a tear in the uterus.

A spokesman today at the Hope Clinic said she was unable

LIFT STATION ELEVATIONS are checked by engineers of the G. H. Sternberg Co. Friday at the replacement site of the Lockhaven Drive lift station. The station was installed by the Archer Daniels Midland Co., the primary user, then decided to the city. The construction of the new lift station is being paid for by ADM under an agreement with Granite City. Several houses in the Steelecrest Subdivision have been allowed to tap home sewage systems into the present lift station.

Arrest in fatal shooting

Kenneth Siebert, 20, of 2320 Iowa St., was shot fatally in the abdomen in front of his home at 9:20 p.m. Sunday. He died one-half hour later at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Assistant State's Attorney Joe Brown announced at 11:15 a.m. today that he has approved a charge of voluntary manslaughter against Carl Womack, 21, of 2330 Iowa St., in connection with last night's fatal shooting. Womack's brother, Robert, 18, has been cleared of suspicion in the case, police said.

Officers who had been up all night working on the murder case, said this morning they believe Mr. Siebert had a disagreement with a woman residing in his building and that

Expanded youth employment funds

By HARRY BARNES
Press-Record Staff Writer
Madison County will receive an estimated $634,895 in federal funds to initiate new youth employment programs in sections of the county that will include the Quad-City area, it was announced Friday by the Employment and Training Administration of the U.S. Department of Labor.

The estimates of funding for Madison County were among those designated for 446 state, county and city governments acting as sponsors for programs being conducted under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). The estimated allocations are for two of four programs authorized by the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act of 1977 which was signed into law early this month by President Carter.

Estimated allocations announced Friday are not actual allotments but are to be used by the governmental units in planning for the new programs—the Youth Community Conservation and Improvement Projects (YCCIP) and the Youth Employment and Training Programs (YETP).

The announcement listed an estimated grant of $105,623 to Madison County for the YCCIP program, $25,203 for planning and $504,069 for the YETP program.

On and off the record Block 'party' for fleeing cars

By MICK STRANGE
Press-Record Staff Writer

Based on the design and principle of tank barriers, welding students at the Venice-Lincoln Technical (VLT) school built portable road blocks for the Venice Police.

Lloyd Patterson, welding instructor at VLT, who also is Venice City Clerk, supervised the construction and design.

"I was talking to Chief of Police Ralph Brawley one night and he mentioned he wished they had some type of an effective but portable road block," Patterson said.

"I began thinking about it as I am looking for useful ways that will give the students a good experience in different welding techniques, and we came up with what I think will stop almost anything," Patterson said.

Constructed of reinforcement steel, the spikes are 14 inches long with sharpened points, braced with two inch steel bars in two foot lengths and connected with chain links.

If a car failed to stop at a road block, the device which is designed below the center of the wheel would blow out the front tires, wrap around the car, could easily blow out the rear tires, puncture the gas tank and oil pan and could go through the floor of the auto, depending on the speed at which the device is hit. The faster a car is going the more damage it would do, according to Patterson.

Patterson said, "With police cars blocking a road, a car can crash right through them and keep on going. Ropes can be attached to the nine foot sections of this device with an officer standing off to the side. Should a car try to run around the road block they can be easily pulled in front of the car with the rope."

The new road block can be carried in the back of a squad car with no problem as it curls around neatly, Patterson commented.

Below-cost steel price competition

(Third of a series)
In reviewing the history of steel import penetration, it is easy to conclude that lower production costs by themselves have never been sufficient to account for the success of foreign producers in the U.S. market.

Instead, artificial exchange rates, border tax rebates, shortages, strikes and threats of strikes, and whenever necessary below-cost prices have provided foreign producers with a margin of advantage they would not have been able to derive from production cost advantages alone.

A detailed analysis of their pricing strategy reveals that Soil scientists of the Soil Conservation Service and Madison County are in the field gathering soil information for a soil survey of Madison County. They will work in the Granite City, Nameoki and Venice Township areas through this fall.

This project is funded jointly by the Soil Conservation Service and the Madison County Board. The soil survey staff has six soil scientists.

Survey staff leader is Tyrone Goddard, an SCS employee, along with Ken Gotsch, Irene Watterson and Paul Youngstrom. John Doll and Randy Leeper are employed by Madison County as part of the cooperative agreement.

The soil survey is an inventory of the kinds of soils in the area. Key to the survey are soil maps which identify the location of different soils. Such maps are made by walking over the land and looking at the soil. The soil scientist uses a one-inch diameter probe to examine the soil to a depth of five feet. With each boring, he observes the color pattern, thickness, texture, structure, pH and drainage characteristics of each soil layer. Taken together these enable him to identify the kind of soil.

This is recorded on an aerial photograph as a symbol specific for each kind of soil. Landscape features, such as percent slope, surface drainage pattern and degree of erosion, also are recorded.

Lines are drawn on the photograph to separate soils having differences in soil properties. These soil maps will be part of the official Soil survey for Madison County, survey leaders said.

In addition to the photo-based soil maps, the published soil survey will contain written descriptions of each kind of soil along with interpretations for various land uses.

These interpretations indicate where problems are likely to occur for selected land uses. The soil survey provides a warning signal for such problems as poor drainage, high clay content, soil instability and flood hazards. The soil survey serves as a guide to wise use of the land.

Reputations important to officeholders

(24th in a series on politics in Madison County)

Although it is easy for people to voice caustic generalities about public officials, discussion of specific officeholders is a serious matter requiring care and documentation.

Axioms cited by some of the officials are that a reputation earned over a long period can be damaged quickly, whether fairly or unfairly, and that accurate follow-up information doesn't always catch up with mistaken allegations.

A former Madison mayor, Raymond Kozielski, has taken exception to what he regards as the character assassination and has filed suit for $15 million from the Alton newspaper, it was disclosed here this month.

Kozielski, associated with the Combined Investment Co. and a former Madison alderman as well as mayor, contends that the Alton Telegraph and two of its employees composed "certain false and defamatory letters" that are presented in his suit as Exhibits 1 and 2.

It is alleged that "the letters were mailed to Brian Conboy of the U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, which letters were duly received by Conboy, opened and read by him and his subordinates."

"The plaintiff did not learn of the existence of the letters or of the publication until Jan. 26, 1977, when same were attached to a complaint filed in the Circuit Court of Madison County in a case entitled James C. Green vs. Alton Telegraph."

Kozielski's suit says that "the letters purport to be a report of a possible link between the Chicago family of the Cosa Nostra and Piasa First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Alton, and of some of the principal characters involved."

"Said letter further states that some bankers are hot about some pledge deals between Piasa and Green and a man by (Continued on Page 10)

Research is being conducted locally on 100 forms of rheumatic disease, according to a survey by The Arthritis Foundation.

Reviewing Arthritis Foundation-sponsored research, Eastern Missouri Chapter officials have made plans to increase local grants while seeking more support for the national Arthritis Foundation research program. The chapter is a member agency of the Tri-Cities Area United Way.

Sixty-four thousand dollars is presently being utilized in research projects at the Washington University and University of Missouri Medical Schools, which boast two of the 46 arthritis centers receiving funds from the national (Continued on Page 3)

Cystic fibrosis drive opens

Citizens of the metropolitan area took to the streets yesterday and will continue through Sunday — as volunteer marchers for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's 1977 Breath of Life Campaign.

Marching door-to-door, the volunteers are asking for contributions to help children who suffer from cystic fibrosis and other lung-damaging diseases.

"The annual Breath of Life Campaign raises funds for research to find a cure for cystic fibrosis, and for care and education programs benefiting children suffering from CF and other lung-damaging diseases," said Larry Stallings, former Cardinal Football player and president of the Gateway Chapter of the CF Foundation.

"Few people know that lung diseases are second only to cancer in taking the precious lives of children," explained Stallings. Cystic Fibrosis, which occurs once in every 1,600 live births in the United States, is the most serious of all children's lung diseases.

A presently incurable disease, CF produces a thick, sticky mucus which clogs the lungs and digestive system of its victims.

According to Stallings, almost half the money raised in the local Breath of Life Campaign will stay in this community to benefit children with CF and other lung diseases like severe asthma, chronic bronchitis, and bronchiectasis.

The remaining funds collected in the area will be distributed through the national CF Foundation to help support research for a control or cure of cystic fibrosis, a leading genetic killer of children.

The contributions also will help support national, professional, and public education programs on children's lung diseases, and the Foundation's Cystic Fibrosis Center Program.

Over 127 CF Centers are now providing diagnosis, treatment and referral services for children with cystic fibrosis, other pulmonary diseases and digestive disorders related to CF. Because most are located in medical schools or universities, the centers also provide a forum for research and teaching on cystic fibrosis.

Lung-damaged children in the area receive care at Cystic Fibrosis Centers in Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital and St. Louis Children's Hospital. Stallings pointed out that about seven (?) scientists and physicians in our area have received research awards for 1977 from the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

"When the CF Foundation was established in 1955, few children with CF survived past school age. Today, 50 per cent of all CF-affected children can be expected to live past age 18," said Stallings.

Business, industrial factors rated high here, survey shows

Factors of the Quad-City area contributing to the industrial and business climate have been rated in all instances as "average" or "above average" in a survey conducted by the Industrial Development Committee of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce, it was reported Friday.

The survey was made of selected businesses and industries to determine views on strong points of the community such as transportation, availability of water, the highway system, labor sources, taxes, utilities and others.

"This phase of the survey was most encouraging, since it indicates that we have the assets needed for a much stronger economy in the years to come," a committee report said.

"It would seem logical to assume that we can not only anticipate expansion of our existing business and industry, but should be able to attract new industry if we can find ways to improve our present facilities."

"One of the more glaring weaknesses is the lack of major sanitary sewers in outlying areas."

The survey also included obtaining the views of those contacted on the attitude of government agencies and other organizations toward business and industry.

With the exception of the federal and state governments, this group rendered a majority view that all other agencies were "average" or "above average" in their attitudes toward local business and industry, the report added.

"There was great displeasure expressed with the legislation, regulation and general interference by federal and state governments in the operation of their companies," it said.

"One of the major roles of the Chamber of Commerce in this area is to foster economic growth. It was our hope that through this survey we might learn of specific items needing attention in order to accomplish that goal.

"The business leaders surveyed were asked to tell us specific areas in which they would like assistance. Their suggestions can generally be summarized in the following:

1. "Keep the public better informed on problems confronting business."
2. "Work more closely with state and federal legislators to be sure they understand the problems they are creating before enacting legislation which tends to discourage expansion."

These matters will be given careful thought and an approach developed to accommodate the wishes of our business and industry, chamber officials said.

Appeals Board approves two use permits

The Madison County Zoning Board of Appeals has used recommendations that the Madison County Board approve two special use permits in Quad-City area townships.

The zoning board recommends approval of a special use permit for Edward Buehler to construct a residence two miles northeast of Route 111 and Canal Road, in an M3 heavy industrial area of Chouteau Township. Also recommended is a variance in the side yard set-back requirements for the home.

Also endorsed is a request by Elvis J. Smith for a permit to place a mobile home on Wasman Lane near Missouri Avenue in the South Roxana area in an agricultural district of Chouteau Township.

Stipulations suggested are that the permit be granted for the duration of the lifetime of Smith and for the sole use and occupancy of Smith's family. The unit must be removed from the lot as soon as the need for it has expired.

The Madison County Board will act on the recommendation at its September meeting.

County Manpower program, said that specific allocations will be announced later after governmental sponsoring units have had time to plan specific projects and their financial requirements.

Charuch said the county expects to receive the approximately $25,203 planning grant soon. Funds for the two new youth programs will be finalized later, since the programs will not go into operation until January.

The YCCIP will provide jobless youth with employment through supervised work on "projects that produce tangible outputs and benefits to their home community," he said.

Eligible youth must be 16 through 19, whether in school or out of school, and having difficulty in getting work.

YETP will provide youth—predominantly low-income young people who have severe handicaps in obtaining jobs—with work and training opportunities that will help their job and career prospects.

Program activities authorized include work experience, on-the-job training, classroom and other training, career-oriented counseling and job placement services.

Steel price

foreign steel suppliers. Competitive conditions in the U.S. make it difficult for domestic producers to selectively match foreign discounts, instead, to prevent the sale of one imported ton they would have to offer discounts to many customers who would demand the same price.

Therefore, U.S. producers would lose more money by matching import prices than by allowing their market share to be eroded.

Between 1964 and 1968, when foreign producers were generally increasing their penetration of the U.S. market, steel left Japan at average prices of at least $50-$55 per net ton less than the average U.S. domestic price.

A detailed study of the U.S. and Japanese costs during this period shows that the maximum cost advantage which could possibly be distributed to Japanese producers during this period is about $40.

Therefore, it can be concluded that Japanese producers were shipping steel to the U.S. at prices well below their average production costs.

Continuing through the end of the worldwide steel shortage in 1974, the need to price export shipments to the U.S. at below full production costs was diminished.

An artificially high value of the U.S. dollar reduced the effective cost and therefore increased the effective price of foreign steel production in dollar terms until mid-1971.

As a result of voluntary export restraints and strong home markets, there was generally less pressure on many foreign producers (especially the Japanese) to increase their share of the U.S. market.

As a result, the level of discount offered to U.S. customers diminished between 1970 and 1972, and the effective price foreign producers could charge these U.S. customers increased.

For these reasons, there was less below-cost pricing between 1969 and 1972.

And in 1973-74, foreign producers were actually able to earn sizeable windfall profits on shipments to the U.S.

By 1976, prices once again fell to levels substantially below production costs as foreign producers were once again domestic prices in order to win customers from domestic producers.

In 1977, the U.S. industry is well positioned for competition in the U.S. market with respect to the major factor costs of production.

Capital charges per ton are about the same in the U.S. as elsewhere.

At worst, using market prices to estimate raw material costs, the U.S. industry is equal to foreign producers.

The employment cost advantage once enjoyed by European producers has all but vanished.

Japanese producers enjoy an employment cost advantage of about $70 per ton, which is roughly equal to the importation costs which Japanese producers must absorb.

Other factors being equal, therefore, Japanese producers might be able to deliver steel in the U.S. at prices equal to domestic prices and still reflect the full Japanese production costs.

However, the Japanese cost structure would not permit them to profit and offer a discount in the U.S. market.

The area of greatest uncertainty for domestic steel companies in 1977, therefore, is whether U.S. public policymakers will permit a continuation of foreign below-cost pricing tactics.

Steel producers in Japan and Europe entered 1977 with considerably more capacity than they needed at current levels of domestic consumption and export demand.

This situation was brought about in part by the unusual severity of the decline in worldwide steel demand beginning in 1975.

The situation was compounded by government intervention in the steel operations of these countries. The involvement led to greater commitments to new capacity at the peak of the cycle and slower cutbacks when demand turned down than market forces would have dictated.

Realistically, foreign producers have only three ways to resolve this excess capacity situation.

One is to hope that worldwide demand will recover.

However, given present capacity levels and a minimum estimate of new commitments, it is unlikely that worldwide demand will recover.

However, given present capacity levels and a minimum estimate of new commitments, it is unlikely that worldwide demand will be sufficient to support world capacity in the near term and possibly not until 1980.

Failing a sufficient recovery in total consumption, the second alternative is to increase exports, which can only be accomplished by capturing business from domestic producers.

It is unlikely that more exports can be forced into the consuming nations outside North America; these nations have low costs in their home markets and/or use rigid import quotas to protect their domestic industries.

Therefore, the U.S. market will be the principal target for any increase in exports from Japan and the EEC (European Economic Community).

The third alternative is for Japanese and European producers to retire existing capacity at a more rapid rate than projected, however.

Accelerated retirements will be bitterly opposed by those whose political and economic interests are involved.

Arthritis

Arthritis Foundation. Another $37,032 is being spent this year by the chapter for arthritis research programs at St. Louis University, the Jewish Hospital, the University of Missouri and Washington University.

"One of the primary objectives of The Arthritis Foundation," says Eastern Missouri Chapter President Bernard A. Ross, "is the support of research."

"The hope for all of us, victims and potential victims alike," he continued, "is that through clinical research we will find better ways of treating the many complex forms of arthritis now known."

"Basic research programs seek the cause and eventually the cure of the rheumatic diseases now afflicting 50 million Americans."

University of Missouri Medical Center — Columbia, — and through equipment loan closets and patient self-help classes.

Research is conducted at St. Louis University School of Medicine, University of Missouri School of Medicine, Columbia and the Washington University School of Medicine, with the hope that medical science will soon know the causes and cures for arthritis in its many forms.

Facts and figures on arthritis include: 20,300,000 Americans have arthritis. Arthritis is a term used to describe nearly 100 different rheumatic diseases; 600,000 new victims are claimed each year.

Rheumatoid arthritis usually strikes in the 30 to 40 "prime-of-life" years. It strikes women three times as often as men. Arthritis hits one of every four families.

It causes the loss of more workdays than any other disease except the common cold.

The cost of arthritis in America is over $13 billion this year, including almost $6 billion in lost wages and homemaker service and more than $3.6 billion in medical care.

Arthritis spend more than $400,000,000 yearly on quack "cures" while less than $20,000,000 is spent on arthritis research each year.

Latest research indicates arthritis may be caused by a virus-like agent which triggers the body's defense system into turning against itself, creating the painful and disabling inflammation that is the key to the disease.

Warriors begin title defense Wednesday

It could be a rough start of the season for Granite City High South's Soccer Warriors. They will be opening their 1977 season and defense of their state championship Wednesday with a home game against Waterloo, but they will have to do it without last year's leading scorer.

David Goldschmidt, the area's leading scorer last season, will be lost to the team indefinitely because of a knee injury suffered in a recent practice session.

"David was running and made a sudden stop," said South Coach Gene Baker, adding, "He wrenched the knee."

According to doctor's reports, there is a possibility cartilage damage occurred. However, at present, Goldschmidt will probably be lost for at least the first three games.

Sophomore Phil Belganski is set to take the spot vacated by Goldschmidt in the lineup. The Warriors will also be starting someone else new to the lineup. Freshman David Fernandez will start at the outside left position.

Waterloo is relatively new to soccer, but fields an extremely hard-working team.

How will the injury to Goldschmidt affect Wednesday's game?

"It really shouldn't hurt us too bad for this one," said Baker, "but we can't go through the entire season like this, we'll be needing him down the stretch."

The junior-varsity game is set to start at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon at GCIS South field with the varsity game set for 4:30.

"We're opening the season with an injury to one of our key players," Baker added. "It's up to us to see how well we'll be able to fill in for him."

"But in game competition, we'll definitely be needing him later in the year."

The rest of the team is looking healthy, however. David's brother Mark is healthy as well as the rest of the South eleven.

Downtown GC carnival starts Thursday night

Quadrant City area residents staying in town during the Labor Day holiday weekend will find entertainment at a three-day carnival in Downtown Granite City, starting at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Hours of operation will be from 6 p.m. until 11 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a special kiddies' matinee session from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday, when a reduced rate will be charged on all midway rides.

The event will be staged on Edison Avenue, between 18th and 19th streets.

Sponsoring the carnival will be the Granite City Jaycees, in cooperation with the Downtown Granite City Promotion Committee of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce. Bill Hoffman, Jaycee project chairman, said today the carnival will feature midway rides for children and adults, games and booths sponsored by local youth, service and fraternal organizations.

Free discount tickets allowing carnival patrons a 20 per cent reduction on rides currently are available from merchants in Downtown Granite City. Hoffman advised.

Proceeds from the fair will be divided equally between the Illinois Jaycees Camp for Disabled Children and the National Muscular Dystrophy Foundation, the chairman said.

The Labor Day holiday carnival has a two-fold purpose, it was explained. In addition to raising funds for approved Jaycee charitable endeavors, it is hoped to encourage area residents to visit business firms in the downtown area.

Boy on bike, car collide

Bob Cochran, 14, of 4305 Rode Ave., was injured when his bicycle and the auto of Charles Cook, 100 Briarhaven Drive, collided on the parking lot of Tri-Mor Bowl on Namecki Road at 12:50 p.m. Sunday.

Police were told the auto was southbound in the alley on the east side of the bowling alley and the bike was eastbound and turning into the alley when they collided. Neither could see the other because the corner of the building was between them.

Cochran was taken by Cook to St. Elizabeth Hospital where he was treated for a cut to his left leg and a bruise to his right lower leg. X-rays were taken and he was released.

Officers said they found a .45 caliber pistol in a bag in the attic of Siebert's home which had three empty shells in it. They could not be certain the gun was the one used in the shooting.

An autopsy was conducted at 10 a.m. today, but results have not been announced. Mr. Siebert suffered what appeared to be a bullet entry wound near his left kidney and what appeared to be an exit wound in his lower right chest.

Chief of Police Ronald J. Weizer said this morning, "I want to comment the Granite

Surveys by legislators—useful or just political?

By ROBERT ESTILL
Press-Record
Washington Bureau

Do you want your congressman to use his franked (postage free) mail privileges to seek your opinion?

Do you think he might be as interested in what you have to say as he is in getting his name before you in a questionnaire? Do you take the trouble to complete and return the questionnaire—at your own expense, since the franking privilege does not extend to return mail from a constituent?

If the answer is "yes" to all of the above, you are among the few constituents who get in their Congressional queries. Usually, only about one in ten reply. District surveys are used by most congressmen; they vary not only in issues covered, but in frequency and scope of distribution. Senator Charles H. Percy also uses surveys periodically.

Reps. Paul Findley, R-Pittsfield, and George O'Brien, R-Joliet, are among congressmen who send their surveys district-wide, once a year.

Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ottawa, has sent one questionnaire to the 15th District and plans another district-wide survey later this year.

Rep. John N. Erlenborn, R-Glen Ellyn, will send out a couple of surveys this year. But he limits each survey to about 50,000 questionnaires, using different groups of voters each time.

Rep. Robert McClell, R-Lake Bluff, is even more conservative in his use of questionnaires. He sends out one computer-card to each home in his district every two years, at the start of each session of Congress.

Content and composition of questions vary greatly. In some cases, the responses are as predictable as a congressman's assertion that he takes the survey results to heart.

"Should congressmen be required to vote on all proposals which increase federal salaries, including their own?" asks Findley.

"A whopping 83 per cent say 'yes'."

"Should the food stamp program be limited to those families whose income is at or below the poverty line established by the government?" Queries Corcoran.

"Yes" say 80 per cent of the 17,000 respondents.

"Do you think these questionnaires are a worthwhile expenditure of public funds?" asks O'Brien.

And 84 per cent of the respondents answered in the affirmative, a response which did not surprise O'Brien's press secretary, Theodore Cormaney. He reasons that most people who take the time to complete a questionnaire are going to regard it as worthwhile.

The questionnaires have value, even when some of the responses are predictable, the congressmen said.

"Generally, a congressman has a good feel for his district and can predict the way it will run, but sometimes the odds will surprise you," said O'Brien.

"When I ask about the death penalty, 88 per cent were in favor of it. I was surprised by the sheer volume."

McClell had the same reaction.

"Generally, I am not surprised because I find the points of view of those I represent are pretty much in harmony with my own," McClell said. He feels the value lies not only in the reassurance that a congressman and his constituents are on the same wave length.

"There is a lot of good will engendered," he believes. "And several thousand people volunteer additional information. That gives them a sense of participation and alerts me to their interests."

It is the "engendering of good will" aspect that privacy critics generally attack at election time from non-incumbent candidates that surveys are but a way for the incumbent to get his name and face before the voters at the taxpayers' expense.

To counter this criticism, the House has adopted new rules which would become law if pending legislation is approved. Under the new rules that take effect Jan. 1, 1978, the number of postal patron mailings would be limited to the equivalent of six district-wide mailings a year (there currently is no limit).

There is no limit proposed for the number of individually-addressed mailings. But many congressmen do not have mailing lists by name because they are expensive to maintain, according to a member of the staff of the House Committee on Congressional Mailing Standards.

Samples of postal patron mail must be submitted to the commission for an advisory opinion. And the cost of preparing and printing any mass mailing must be paid exclusively from appropriated funds.

The latter provision bars a congressman from dipping into his private funds for a campaign chest to finance his mailing.

The old rules said a candidate cannot send mass mailing less than 28 days before a primary or general election. The new rules move the cutoff date to 90 days before an election.

The House rules also govern the size of the picture of the congressman that can appear on his mass mailings. And there is a "guideline" not a rule, regulation or law—which says the congressman should not refer to himself more than eight times on an 8 1/2 by 11-inch page.

Corcoran, a member of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, said there is nothing wrong in using the frank for "legitimate, legislative purposes," including soliciting constituent opinion.

"The problem is that it has been abused," Corcoran noted. "It has been used for political purposes."

The congressmen and their aides who were interviewed said they give considerable time and thought as to the content of the questionnaires.

Teasers are used to draw the constituents into the survey.

The first question on O'Brien's "sound-off" survey is a query as to how the constituent rates President Carter, Congress, Gov. James Thompson, the Postal Service, Social Security, Internal Revenue and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"We want the highest possible response," explained Cormaney. "They like to do the rating; it is fun to do."

Once hooked, the voters will move on to multiple-choice questions on a variety of more serious questions, according to his theory.

Findley uses a similar device. The first of 11 "yes," "no" and "undecided" questions on his annual survey this is "Should the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit be continued?"

The Pittsfield Republican deliberately chose that as the lead question because he felt it is a subject of interest to many of his legislative aides.

Findley follows a multi-step process in selecting the questions.

First, he asks each staff member to submit at least five questions. Then a list of about 50 questions is presented to his advisory council in the district, and the council is asked to recommend ten questions.

He uses most of the questions which they recommend, but the congressman makes the final decision on the questions and the wording.

Erlenborn uses fewer questions, but he tries to provide a more detailed explanation of the issues. His recent questionnaire contained two questions on energy, one on a proposed National Labor Relations Act revision and three other questions.

Both the energy and labor questions contained straightforward explanations of the "pros" and "cons" of the issues.

How much does constituent response affect the congressman's vote?

"What does he do if the voters are going one way, and the congressman—possibly armed with better information—feels that it is not the right way?" Erlenborn uses the surveys as one of the factors in helping reach a decision, but it is not an absolute guide, according to Mike Chapin, his press secretary.

"He has been elected by the people to make a decision," the aide said. "As a congressman, he is exposed to a great deal of information the average person does not get."

O'Brien said he cannot recall any situation where the vote was contrary to the response on a survey question. But he said he did vote against the ethics bill, which he regards as unconstitutional because it limits earned income.

If it had been the subject of a survey, voters probably would have favored it because of the "ethics" in the title, he said.

McClell has championed some causes—the 18-year-old vote and the Equal Rights Amendment, among others—that might not have reflected the overwhelming sentiments in his district.

"I always say in the questionnaire that I am going to be the decision-maker, and I am not going to let it (the results) control my vote," he said.

Findley has a similar view. He has said he has to vote what he feels is best; and, if it is contrary to district sentiment, then he has an "education problem."

One example is the question of deregulation of natural gas. Findley again voted for

Warns against salesmen with 'energy' devices

Attorney General William J. Scott has cautioned homeowners that "fast-back operators" can be expected to be knocking on their doors, peddling "insulation" deals, "solar energy" devices, and various home improvements packaged to take advantage of the current interest in saving energy.

Scott said that all of the "buzz words" relating to energy will be tossed at home-owners in an effort to "spark" the activities of fly-by-night operators who peddle so-called home improvements every fall in Illinois.

Scott suggested that homeowners deal only with locally established firms, identifiable by listing in the local telephone book, "so that if any problems occur, the dealer can be found to make corrections."

Scott also said that homeowners should take the normal precautions in every transaction by having all important representations and warranties written into the contract, to reduce the risk of later disputes. He suggested elderly persons should arrange to have younger relatives, an attorney or banker, approve any major deregulation, although 48 per cent of the voters were opposed to deregulation and 39 per cent were for it.

Corcoran follows a more strict definition of the title, "Representative in Congress."

"When I find my knowledge of an issue and position on it is out of whack with a sizeable majority of my constituents, then I recognize that I am off base or the people simply are not as well informed," he said.

"Then it is my responsibility to try to get the facts out and ask again."

If he and the constituents are still at odds, he said, he would then vote their way.

While the congressmen laud the value of the surveys, they would not want to pay the full cost out of their pockets.

Postal patron mail goes at a third-class, bulk rate 7.5 cents, while surveys sent first-class and individually addressed would go at the 13-cent rate.

That gets expensive when a district has 150,000 to 180,000 households.

If they had to pay for the survey out of their own pockets, McClell said he would send it to fewer people and Corcoran said he would not send the surveys as frequently.

home-repair transaction. In the case of insulation, he suggested that homeowners be sure to test the material being installed to determine that it's fire-resistant and moisture-repellant.

Scott said his Consumer Protection Division has received few complaints to date relating to "energy" sales pitches, but he noted that as soon as the leaves start to fall, the complaints come in with them.

Scott said that he expects the influx of complaints to be worse this year with people being receptive to "sales-pitches" based on conserving energy.

Art groups receive grants

Revised Girl Scout handbooks available

The first major program changes in Girl Scouting since 1963, for girls ages 6 through 11, are encompassed in "Worlds to Explore," a new combined handbook for Brownie and Junior Girl Scouts.

"Worlds to Explore" was published by Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. with an initial printing of one and a half million copies. While it contains many new activities for today's and tomorrow's world, it also retains much that is familiar and traditional in Girl Scouting. In addition to the format, the chief innovations within the handbook's 400 profusely illustrated pages are projects for youngsters in the fields of science and technology, and the treatment of a career, as well as the home, as a natural part of a woman's life.

The new combined handbook has six sections: an introduction to Girl Scouting, and five "Worlds to Explore" — World of Well-Being, World of People, World of Today and Tomorrow, World of the Arts and World of the Out-Of-Doors. Each illustrated chapter, including many pieces of how-to art, offers a broad range of activities. Unlike with the previous separate handbooks, girls can choose activities according to interests and abilities rather than age level.

The World of the Out-Of-Doors section expands on the traditional Girl Scouting involvement with camping, nature, and conservation. Because, for example, girls are doing more at a younger age, for the first time Brownies are encouraged to go troop camping. There is greater emphasis on ecology and understanding of the environment — the living space that surrounds one — whether it's on a farm, in an urban apartment, a suburban house or mobile home.

In the World of Today and Tomorrow chapter, the youngsters are introduced to the metric system, to carpentry, in addition to simple scientific experiments, and insights into what the future can hold for them as working women. World of the Arts includes activities in the whole range of arts, visual, performing and literary.

Activities in the World of Well-Being chapter highlight physical and emotional health, nutrition, the home, safety, and consumer awareness among other topics. In the World of People section, citizenship projects are geared to differing cultures and building pride in one's heritage.

Incorporated throughout the new handbook's five worlds are certain basics that have made Girl Scouting unique and that have stood the test of time, such as the principles embodied in the Promise and Law, and the concept of service and international friendship. The handbooks are available in the 2,000 Girl Scout departments of retail stores in all parts of the United States; and by mail from Girl Scout National Equipment Services and J.C. Penny catalog.

Area stores selling Girl Scout equipment are Seidel's, East St. Louis; Feltner's, Belleville; Famous Bar, Fairview Heights; Penny's East Gate Plaza, East Alton, and Carp's, Granite City.

SUMMER BRIDE. Mrs. Phillip Hill Jr. who was married Friday evening at the First United Presbyterian Church. Formerly Miss Joyce Rochelle Warnhoff, the bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Corey, 2471 Waterman Ave.

Hill-Warnhoff wedding at First Presbyterian

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Joyce Rochelle Warnhoff, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Corey, 2471 Waterman Ave., and Phillip Dale Hill Jr., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip D. Hill, 2549 Boyle Ave., Friday evening, at the First United Presbyterian Church.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony at 7 o'clock were the Rev. David Maxton and Father Kenneth Becker, before an altar banked with bouquets of white gladioli, pink carnations and daisies.

Mrs. Margaret MacZura sang, "The Wedding Song," "Whither Thou Goest" and The Lord's Prayer, accompanied by Mrs. Isabell Schmidt at the organ.

Escorted down the white carpeted aisle, illuminated with burning tapers in tall candleabra, the bride wore a full length white dotted Swiss gown complemented with a fluted brim hat accented with tiny lace ruffles.

Venise and Chiny lace created a square yoke design on the bodice, formed the high neckline and vertical lines of the bishop sleeves.

Her floor length veil of bridal illusion was attached to her hat and she held a cascade bouquet of silk white daisies, pink roses and baby breath.

Honor attendant Mrs. Robert Richardson Jr., an aunt of the bride, and bridesmaids Miss Terri Moran, Mrs. Tom Talley, the bride's aunt, Mrs. Steve Avedisian and Miss Tami Hill, a sister of the groom, were gowned alike in formal length pink dresses.

A white eyelet trim enhanced the square necklines of the molded bodices and also defined an apron design on the full skirts.

Each attendant wore a picture hat accented with large silk roses. They carried nosegays of fresh pink carnations, daisies and baby's breath, festooned with lace streamers.

The candlelighters Miss Donna Ebertson and Miss Cindy Davis wore long mint green gowns.

Dick Lynch attended the groom as best man. Pete Mushill, Steve Powderly, Michael Hill, a brother of the groom, and Tom Talley, an uncle of the bride, served as groomsmen.

Escorting the guests to their seats were Walt Reinhardt and Dan Sedej.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Corey wore a long mint green polyester gown fashioned with an accordion pleated skirt, high mock turtle neckline of pleated chiffon and elbow length cape.

Mrs. Hill, mother of the groom, was attired in pastel blue Empire gown designed with a sleeveless bodice, V-neckline and enhanced with a beaded design at the high rise waistline and chiffon cape. Both mothers wore corsages of white roses.

Miss Annie Harris attended the guest book and Mrs. Marilyn Harris served as hostess at a reception held at the Croatian Home, following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill, parents of the groom, hosted the rehearsal dinner at Charlie's Restaurant. The bride attended Granite City High School for three years and graduated from DeKalb High School, DeKalb, Ill., in 1975. She is presently employed at Granite City Boat and Motor.

A 1975 Granite City High School graduate, the groom also graduated this year from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, with a B.S. degree in physical education. They will reside in Granite City following a wedding trip to the Lake of the Ozarks.

NORTH SOCCER COACH Bob Kehoe makes a point as he instructs his troops at last Thursday's practice session at the GCHS North athletic field. (Press-Record Photo)

Work, conditioning, the basics; keys for Kehoe's soccer Steelers

By PETE HAYES
Press-Record Sports Editor

The weather was hot. It was a typical August afternoon, but summer had drawn to a close for most Quad-City area school-age children and youths. In fact, it was the first day of school. It was Thursday, Aug. 25.

At Granite City High School North, Head Soccer Coach Bob Kehoe was putting his athletes through loosening-up exercises and running.

But it was not a typical high school soccer practice scene. Instead of simply telling the players how to do the exercises, Kehoe joined the soccer team hopditals in actually doing them. In fact, Coach Kehoe is in as good physical condition, if not better, than most of the younger athletes exercising with him. The coach notices the team is having difficulty with a particular exercise, so he gets down on the ground and demonstrates.

"If you are going to do this, you've got to do it right," he comments, adding, "Wow, let's get it right."

But Kehoe isn't the tough dictatorial type at his practices. He believes that it must be fun, too. He occasionally clown around with the players and laughs with them.

But they all know what they have to do. While practice is fun, it also is serious business. The first game (at home against Quincy on Sept. 3) is not very far away.

Fundamentals are one of the most important parts to any sport. In accordance, Kehoe demonstrates how to throw the ball in from the sidelines as one of the drills.

Getting the most out of the talent available is important to Kehoe. "We've got good talent," he says. "It's just a matter of getting it together as a team."

There's a familiar face out on the practice field.

"Hey Steve, will you help me with this drill?," asks Coach Kehoe.

The player he is speaking to is North's Mr. Soccer the past few seasons, Steve Stales. He's just there to work out a little and get in shape before he ships off for college.

He has a scholarship to play soccer at Dartmouth.

"Coach Kehoe really knows his stuff," says Stales. "He's a great motivator."

Motivation must be a key. The Steelers seem almost professional when it comes to attitudes. They know what they have to work on, but they still have a good time.

"Water!" shouts Kehoe.

The team runs to the water fountain. It is welcome relief on a hot day — especially when activity has been fast and furious.

After the water, come more work. But this time the work is a little different. An intra-squad scrimmage for a half hour. They have already been at it for 90 minutes. But then, the Sept. 3 first game is only a few days away.

Labor Day tourney starts Wednesday

The pairings for the 13-team Granite City Park District Men's Labor Day Tournament have been announced. The tournament will be held Aug. 31 through Sept. 4 at fields in West Granite City and Wilson Parks.

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, the Raiders will play the Jaycees at 7 p.m. at Wilson. At 8 p.m., McDonald's will play the First Assembly of God. The 9 p.m. game features Razor's Edge against City Temple.

Shang's Liquors plays the Quad-City Businessmen at 8 p.m. Wednesday at West Granite City Park. Midtown 66 plays the Mexican Honorary Commission at 7 p.m. at West Granite City.

First round byes were drawn by Tri-City Merchants, Dempsey-Adams, and Midtown 8A. They automatically advance to the second round of play.

The tournament is a double-elimination affair. The championship game will be played at Wilson Park Sunday at 9 p.m.

Rain halts drag racing Fall Natls.

The American Hot Rod Association's Fall Nationals of Drag Racing finals were rained out at St. Louis International Raceway Sunday afternoon.

The races have been rescheduled for Oct. 15 and 16. All tickets held for Sunday's drag races will be honored at next month's events.

Special events Friday and Saturday, including rocket cars, funny cars, AA-fuel dragsters, pro-stocks and other professional and amateur events, were not delayed by the rains, but a downpour just before the start of the professional finals caused the race to be rescheduled.

East Alton's 'terrible trio' smashes Mercer, 9-4

For Steve Booher, Bob Lyons and Don Broadway it was well worth the trip. They had a very productive day. But Paul Evans and the rest of the Mercer team might just as well stayed home in bed.

Booher, Lyons and Broadway between them had eight runs, batted-in and ten of East Alton's twelve hits as the Vans ripped Mercer 9-4 to win the championship of the Intercity Baseball League yesterday at Wilson Park.

It just wasn't in the cards for Mercer. East Alton jumped out to a 6-0 lead after four innings with two runs in the third, and four in the fourth.

In the fourth inning, Gary Collins walked and advanced to third base on a double by the Vans' Larry Bellm. Booher then walked to load the bases, bring up another part of that deadly threesome, Don Broadway.

Broadway proceeded to pound a grand-slam home run into the seats to start East Alton on its way.

In the sixth, Booher, Broadway and Lyons got their act started again. They connected for a basehit single each, adding two more runs to the Vans' total.

Mercer narrowed the margin in the bottom of the sixth with four runs (all on errors), to cut the East Alton lead to 8-4.

Bob Scott got a single and Bob Hughes was hit by a pitch from Vans' starter Stan Hawkins. Larry Corey then got a single, but no run scored.

Three straight errors by East Alton then followed, allowing the Mercer runs to cross the plate.

The final run for East Alton came in the eighth inning. And you'd never guess who was responsible.

Booher singled, went to second when Broadway was hit by a pitch, and scored when Lyons singled to drive in his third run of the day.

For the day, Booher was three-for-four at the plate. All his hits were singles. Broadway was two-for-five. He had a single, a grand-slam homer and 5 runs-batted-in.

Lyons batted 1,000 yesterday. He went five-for-five, with one triple and four singles for three runs-batted-in.

Stan Hawkins was the winning pitcher for the Vans, finishing with an over-all record of 12-2. He was 10-1 for the regular season and 2-1 in the playoffs. He also won the regular season earned-run title, finishing with an ERA of 1.65.

The Vans thus continued the miraculous comeback that began last Sunday when the players rose from the dead to defeat Mercer after it looked as if they were going to end their season a week earlier than they had wanted.

Mercer was the defending champion, and East Alton was the "defending runner-up" from last season. But this time, the tables were turned.

The season is over for both teams... almost. Mercer is competing in the Tournament of Champions in St. Louis... they could well win that one. But there is one tournament on this side of the Mississippi that they would have loved to have won. They almost did — last week — but not yesterday.

Myers 'big winner' at Tri-City

Bill Byers of East Alton was the "big winner" Saturday night at Tri-City Speedway.

In addition to taking the late-model third heat, he won the handicap race and the 25-lap feature race.

Petri selected for first Sangamon U. soccer squad

Two Belleville College soccer stars will lead the Sangamon State University Prairie Stars in their first intercollegiate soccer season.

Starting at halfback in the Prairie Stars first game Saturday will be Ken Carrioco, 20, East St. Louis. Joining Ken in the match against Bradley University at 2 p.m. is Larry Petri, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Petri, 1725 Moro Ave.

Carrioco was co-captain of last year's Belleville Area College soccer team and was the most improved player on the squad last year according to BAC Coach Mike Moore.

Carrioco was in the starting lineup for Moore's Dutchmen in both 1975 and '76 where he played midfield, a position he also held during his junior and senior years at East St. Louis' Assumption High School.

Petri was goalie for the BAC team, which won the state championship for two consecutive years. He was elected a member of all-state teams in both years. The most valuable player on the Belleville team will play left outside fullback for the Prairie Stars as they start their 18-game schedule Saturday.

Petri was elected to the All-Metro Soccer Team while attending Granite City High School North and was named the outstanding athlete by area high school coaches. Larry will enroll in business-related courses at SSU.

Toby Verdu, another Belleville star, was injured in a recent scrimmage and will not be in the lineup for the Prairie Stars this fall. Verdu who is from Belleville, received a fracture to his left thumb and his leg will be in a cast for at least four months, doctors said.

Johnston, also from St. Charles finished fifth. Bill Holiday of Ballwin, Mo., won the 'B' feature (15 laps) in the late models division. Gary Gerstner from Breese finished second and Bert Chestham of Glenmo, Mo., took third.

Heat winners were Wallace, Wilb Spaulding of Pontoon Beach, Meyers and Chestham. In the sportsman class, Paul Gebhart from Alton, Mo., took the honors in the 15-lap feature. Gary Wallace from Arnold, Mo., took second and Les Gibson of Granite City was third. Pat Walsh of Kirkwood, Mo., landed the number four spot, while Royce Payton from Oakland, Mo., finished fifth.

Heat winners in the sportsman class were Rich Wood of Troy, Ill., Gebhart and Payton. September will be the "Month of Champions" at Tri-City. Saturday night, the sportsman class 50-lap feature will be held. That will be followed Sept. 10 by the late model 50-lap feature.

The midgets' 50-lap feature will be Sept. 17 and the sprints will have their 50-lapper on Sept. 24.

Oct. 1 will be open competition for late models and will close out the season at Tri-City.

The point standings (including Saturday's races) show Spaulding holding a narrow 30-point lead over Russ Wallace in the late models. Spaulding leads 2,775 to 2,745.

Ken Shrumm is in third spot with 2,680. He is followed by Bill Myers 2,680, C.C. Corbin 1,905, Jerry Sifford 1,750, Ken Schrader 1,735, Willie Johnston 1,720, Gittmer 1,550, and Joe Ross 1,480.

GC park levy $473,934

A new 1977-78 tax levy of $473,934 was adopted by the Granite City Park Board in regular meeting last week. The levy, the amount needed in taxes to operate the district, is up from $453,782 last year.

The levy includes $278,804 in the general corporate fund, $138,250 in the recreation fund, $23,460 for tort liability, $31,000 for municipal retirement and $2,400 for auditing.

The tax revenue received under the levy will meet part of the expenditures of the 1977-78 operating budget set this year at $707,955. Other revenue is received from park concessions, swimming pool fees and ice rink fees.

The board also received an estimate from Jim Taylor of Biebel Roofing Co., Belleville, for repairs to the ice rink roof in Wilson Park. The roof has been leaking.

The board will now open bids for the work. Taylor was paid $550 for the work done in preparing the estimate.

A low bid of $25,845 was accepted from Peters Construction Company of Granite City for work to be done on the erection of a new concession building in Wilson Park in the baseball diamond area to replace the present structure.

In other action, the board approved a resolution that if the Army Depot golf course at the end of Niedringhaus Avenue becomes available, it will consider acquiring it. It is a nine-hole course.

Authorized the purchase of eight steel doors for installation at various locations around the park district at a total cost of $1,131.

Land adjacent to the missile base site was believed to be owned by the federal government but is now private property and unavailable for sale. The adjacent land totals 56 acres.

The Illinois Department of Corrections has plans for two 700-prisoner penitentiaries and is conducting a series of more than 20 hearings in areas wishing to be considered.

Lucco again appointed to energy panel

House Speaker William A. Redmond (D-Bensenville) announced during the weekend the reappointment of Representative Joe E. Lucco (D-Edwardsville) as a legislative member of the Illinois Energy Resources Commission.

Redmond said, "Joe Lucco's past record as a legislator, an educator and as a member of this commission have been outstanding. He has proved his knowledge in the area of energy and his dedication to the state by working to resolve our serious energy problems."

Lucco was appointed as a member of the IERC by Redmond in October 1975. He was named chairman of the commission's Intergovernmental Committee in November 1975 by Sen. John L. Knapp (D-Virginia), chairman of the Illinois Energy Resources Commission.

"Lucco has committed himself to the development of coal. He has worked to see that the economy of our state is stimulated through such development, and does not fall behind in finding better and less expensive energy production methods. I can think of no one better qualified to serve as a spokesman for the citizens of Illinois in the field of energy," Redmond concluded.

Cancel hearing on new prison

It was announced Friday by the Buildings Committee of the Madison County Board that a public hearing which was scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 31, concerning possible construction of a state prison in Madison County has been canceled.

The Illinois Department of Corrections decided to cancel the hearing when informed by the committee that land adjacent to county-owned property in Marine Township is not available.

The county currently owns 18.6 acres of what once was a U.S. Army Nike Missile base. The state's proposed medium security prison would require a site of at least 90 acres.

Land adjacent to the missile base site was believed to be owned by the federal government but is now private property and unavailable for sale. The adjacent land totals 56 acres.

The Illinois Department of Corrections has plans for two 700-prisoner penitentiaries and is conducting a series of more than 20 hearings in areas wishing to be considered.

the name of Ray Kozielek. The lawsuit says the letter contains disparaging remarks about the plaintiff for rising quickly from an electrician job to a real estate partnership, and a definition giving a critical connotation to the word "pledge."

The suit by Kozielek quotes the letter as describing a number of persons as either a "hoodlum" or "crime boss." The Madisonian alleges that the newspaper referred to him as associating with a number of persons described by the Telegraph as perpetrators of murders or involved in gambling, casino operations, prostitution, kidnapping, official misconduct in office and other crimes.

He sums up by saying that "the meaning and effect of the defamatory and false letters was that the plaintiff was involved in improper business operations and criminal activities in partnership with and/or controlled by criminals."

All of this is false, Kozielek emphasizes in demanding his "day in court." Seeking $5 million actual damages and $10 million punitive damages, Kozielek says he is being subjected to "ridicule and harassment by his associates and various persons with whom he had enjoyed a good reputation."

Before helping establish Combined Investment Co. and the Investment and Commercial Realty Co., the Madison School District treasurer was employed by the Terminal Railroad Association as an electrical performing repairs on diesel locomotives and other railroad equipment. In brokering real estate and arranging financing, he asserts, he deals with persons risking money and property, based on confidence in his advice and guidance.

BATTERIES STOLEN G. H. Sternberg, of Sternberg Construction Co., reported at 10:05 p.m. Saturday that four 12-volt batteries valued at $200 were stolen from pumps at the Tri-City Port District.

Girl, 14, is struck by hit-run car

Susan Yates, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Yates, 1703 Bremen Ave., was transferred to Cardinal Glennon Hospital, St. Louis, after she was struck by a hit and run driver at 9:15 p.m. Saturday.

Pontoon board meets Tuesday

The Pontoon Beach Village Board will hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Village Hall on Lake Drive.

The meeting was called by Village Board President Floyd David Moss to discuss personnel, unpaid bills and to hear a report by the road committee.

A closed executive session is likely to be called during the meeting on the personnel matters, Moss said. Unpaid bills to be discussed include a repair bill for a police car some members feel is excessive, so it was removed from the bill list at the last meeting.

The village road committee, chaired by Trustee Paul Bennett, is to give its recommendations for road work to be done in the village by the Nameoki Township Highway Department, under contract with the village.

Activity fee for some BAC students

Navy Mothers 850 to host barbecue

Plans to hold a barbecue, as a fund raising event, was the topic of discussion of the Quad-City Navy Mothers, Chapter 850, meeting held Thursday night at the VFW Hall. # High court rule may affect veterans' company pensions

Hundreds of thousands of veterans who joined the armed forces after May 1, 1940, and then returned to their former employers may be affected by a U.S. Supreme Court decision entitling them to full credit under certain company pension plans for time spent in the armed services.

The Justices unanimously affirmed a lower court ruling that the Alabama Power Co. must, in computing pension benefits, give a veteran credit for the two and a half years he was in military service. (Alabama Power Company vs. Davis).

The decision was an interpretation of the veterans' reemployment rights law, which has been on the books since 1940. This law also covers National Guard members and reservists who leave their jobs to perform military training duty. They, too, will benefit from the Supreme Court decision.

The reemployment rights law basically entitles an eligible veteran to reinstatement by his preservice employer with the seniority, status and rate of pay he would have attained with reasonable certainty if he had not been absent for military training or service.

As many World War II veterans currently have been reaching retirement age, the courts only recently have had to deal specifically with the question of how these provisions apply to pension credits for the veteran's time in military service. The Davis case was the first such case to reach the Supreme Court.

The veteran whose claim was being decided, Raymond E. Davis, became a permanent employee of Alabama Power Co. in 1936 and left to serve in the military for 30 months during World War II. Eligible for reemployment rights, he resumed his employment with the company in 1945 and continued working until he retired in 1971.

In 1944, while Davis was in military service, Alabama Power established a company-financed pension plan under which the amount of an employee's pension depended in part on years of "accredited service" accumulated both before and after the plan's establishment.

The plan defined "accredited service" as "service rendered to the company" as a fulltime regular employee, including periods on paid leave but excluding military service time and other unpaid leave periods. In figuring the amount of Davis' pension, Alabama Power refused to count his 30 months of military service as "accredited service," although the law clearly required this to be counted towards his seniority or length of employment.

The particular plan, as the law would require, did count the time toward the number of years of employment an employee had to have in order to get a vested right to a pension.

Davis asked the Department of Labor for help in obtaining a larger pension based on the inclusion of his 30 months of military service in his years of "accredited service." He was represented by the government up to and including the Supreme Court proceedings.

In deciding the Davis case, the Supreme Court said, based on the veteran's work history, that he would "almost certainly" have accumulated "accredited service" for the 30 months in question if he had not entered the military. The Court went on to reject Alabama Power's contention that pension payments are, in the Court's words, "predominantly rewards for continuous employment with the same employer," even though they resemble pay for work performed. Therefore, because the law clearly entitles Davis to pension credit toward his continuous employment with the company, it also entitled him to have those 30 months counted toward his pension.

While the Davis decision substantially clarifies how the reemployment rights law should be applied to employer pension plans, it does not necessarily resolve all such questions. Alabama Power's pension plan is a "defined benefit" plan, under which the amount of the employee's pension is fixed in advance (in this case, a stated number of dollars per month for each year of "accredited service"), and the employer supplies funding needed to provide the benefit. This is probably the most widespread type of pension plan.

Another basic type is known as a "defined contribution" plan, under which funding is specified in advance and the amount of the employee's pension depends on how much of a pension the amounts in the fund will buy.

The Supreme Court left open the question of whether "defined contribution" plans are to be treated the same as "defined benefit" plans under the veterans' reemployment rights law. With a "defined contribution" plan, the Davis precedent may have to be resolved in cases where the employer contributes to plan funding or the plan involves more than one employer.

The Davis decision applies only to persons entitled to protection under the veterans' reemployment rights law. Eligibility requirements for this protection include: (1) Leaving the employment from an "other than temporary" position to enter military training or service; (2) Serving satisfactorily in the military for specified time limits; and (3) Making a timely application for reemployment (in the case of a veteran returning from full active duty, "timely" means within 90 days after his release from military service).

Shorter periods apply to National Guard members and reservists returning from training duty. State and local government employees who completed their military service before December 3, 1974,

Sprays keep insects away

By WAYNE B. SIEPERT
Extension Garden Advisor
Cool nights and warm days cause spiders, crickets and assorted pests to migrate to buildings and basements. Dry weather usually starts a mass movement to find more protection and a warm winter home.

Foundation sprays using diazinon or baygon will effectively prevent spiders, crickets and assorted crawling insects from moving in for the winter. Special care around doors, windows and outdoor lights will be extra safety. Use liquid diazinon or baygon and follow directions on the bottle. Spray the foundation just to the point of runoff. Concentrate on areas near dense shrubs, ground covers, and around doors.

Include a 2-4 inch band of soil along side the foundation. Saturate cracks and crevices in the foundation and in concrete slabs abutting the foundation. One spray in early fall will persist until early winter. Once the spray dries it is harmless to pets and children.

are not covered by federal veterans' reemployment rights. Neither the veterans' reemployment rights law nor the Davis decision applies to a veteran who completed his military service before becoming employed by the employer or group of employers under whose pension plan he seeks benefits.

Veterans' reemployment rights are administered by the Labor Department's Labor-Management Services Administration.

Winning numbers to be chosen in Edwardsville

Hundreds of people will join the ranks of the more than 11 million present Illinois State Lottery winners at 12 noon Thursday, Sept. 1, when the weekly lottery drawing comes to the Edwardsville City Park.

Richard W. Carlson, Illinois State Lottery superintendent, said Chicago TV personality Bob Hale will pick winning numbers and colors for the lottery's 50-cent $1,000,000 Bonanza tickets dated Sept. 1. Tickets can be purchased for the Bonanza game up to 15 minutes prior to the event.

Following the drawing, spectators will be invited to play a free game and can win one of nine Lottery Playday Club subscriptions and a top prize of $100. Each gift subscription entitles the person to one 50-cent State Lottery ticket.

good for a year. Edwardsville will be the 14th stop on the "Lottery Showmobile fun tour" this year. It has been bringing weekly selections to cities throughout Illinois.

Invited to participate with Carlson and Hale will be Edwardsville Mayor Steve Edwards, City Clerk Jack Cunningham, State Senator Sam Vadalabene, and State Representatives Joseph Lucco, Jim McPike and Everett Steele.

The free outdoor game is similar to Instant Bingo, the State Lottery's newest $1 instant game which began May 31.

Tickets can be purchased from any ticket agent or at the Showmobile, which will be at the city park from Wednesday morning through Thursday.

The weekly 50-cent Bonanza numbers and a color will identify winners of up to $5,000, and qualifiers of potential prizes up to $1 million.

In addition to the prizes for the $1,000,000 Bonanza game, an additional $150,000 in daily prizes is being awarded to winners in the Instant Bingo game.

With purchase of a $1 Instant Bingo ticket, players get two games (an Instant Bingo ticket and a Bingo Collector's card) for the price of one, with 25 different ways to win, Carlson said.

To win on the Instant Bingo ticket, a player rubs off the word Bingo and matches the four numbers revealed against those on the ticket. There are 12 ways to win.

A detachable stub at the bottom of each Instant Bingo ticket has a concealed letter-number combination which the player reveals to play on his Bingo Collector's card. There are 13 ways to win on the Collector's card.

Instant Bingo has the largest total prize jackpot in Illinois Lottery history — $15 million divided among 8,417,123 winners. On the average, one in every five players wins.

Prizes in Instant Bingo range from a free ticket to a top prize of $1,000,000.

The $15 million total prize valued represents an amount that is over 40 per cent of revenues anticipated from sale of more than 35 million Instant Bingo boards at $1 each.

Madison agreement ratified

The Madison Board of Education and the American Federation of Teachers, Local 763, have both ratified a new contract for the 1977-78 school year.

The board met Thursday night to approve the agreement after the contract had been ratified by the teachers in a meeting earlier last week.

The new contract calls for a $400 increase on each salary step level for teachers with bachelors degrees, and for teachers with masters' degrees and masters' plus 30 hours toward a doctorate.

Cost factor days were increased from 10 to 12 days. These are days teachers are paid in addition to regular increases, provided they do not miss school. They are paid $30 for each day up to 12.

A teacher would receive a total of $360 additional for the year if the teacher had a bachelor's degree would start at $10,200; $10,800 with a master's degree, and $11,500 with a master's plus 30 hours credit.

Hospital benefits were increased with the board raising from $19.20 to $23 per month the amount paid by the district.

Custodians received a 30-cent-per-hour raise with hospitalization and cost factor days increased the same as the teachers.

BAC establishes new refund policy

A new refund policy for Belleville Area College students has been established by the Board of Trustees.

Beginning with the Spring semester, a student who withdraws from a course or courses during the first two weeks of the semester will receive a full refund of his or her tuition. After the first two weeks, no refund will be made.

Previously, the college operated on a sliding scale for refunds. College officials explained that the old policy created some confusion and was difficult to administer.

Regular cooks received a 30-cent-an-hour raise and head cooks 40 cents an hour, also with the same fringe benefits.

Secretaries received a 50-a-month increase and clerical aides a $300-a-year increase, with both groups receiving the same fringe benefits as the other employees.

The salary increase and fringe benefits will cost the school district between $150,000 and $170,000 depending on payment amount of the cost factor days.

In other board action Mrs. Luvenia Long a Madison High School physical education teacher was named girl's tennis coach; Miss Carol Stearns was named MIS girl's volleyball coach; Miss Carol Stearns was named soccer coach for a modified soccer program being started at Madison High School this year.

$7 activity ticket at North to offer $33 school events

Gilbert Walmesley, principal at North High School, announced today that the Granite City Board of Education is seeking to have all students participate in as many school activities as possible.

In order for this to be possible, the Board of Education has provided a $7 student activity pass which will entitle a student "free" admittance to six home football games, 10 boys and six girls basketball games, seven home wrestling meets, six girls volleyball matches, one Dessert Theatre play and every issue of the school newspaper and three vocal concerts.

Normally, admittance to boys athletic events, the Dessert Theatre and vocal concerts are $1 for students. Girls athletic events are 50 cents per student and the school newspaper sells for 10 cents. All these activities would normally cost a student $33 if he or she were to pay for them individually. This activity ticket will save the participating student $28, Walmesley said.

This $28 savings, students should purchase the pass as soon as possible since our first home football game is Friday, Sept. 9, against Cahokia," Walmesley noted.

Camren earns banking diploma

Herbert Camren, First Granite City National Bank, was among those awarded a diploma Friday at commencement exercises of the Graduate School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Graduation required attendance at three of the annual two-week sessions at UW-Madison and the satisfactory completion of extension problems between the resident sessions.

The school is sponsored by the Central States Conference of Bankers Associations from 16 Midwestern states. About 1,500 bankers were enrolled this year from 45 states and Puerto Rico. The faculty of 150 included bankers specializing in a variety of fields, practicing lawyers, business executives, economists and members of a dozen university and college faculties.

Innovative design sought for old St. Louis post office

An innovative design selected for restoration and renovation of the Old Post Office, St. Louis. The White House Office of Management and Budget has approved the $14.9 million plan to restore the building.

The prospectus for the project is being forwarded by Joel W. Solomon, administrator of the General Services Administration, to appropriate Congressional committees for final approval. Funding for the project is a part of GSA's fiscal 1977-78 budget.

H. D. Harvell, Regional Administrator of GSA, said in Kansas City that "Level 3" architect-engineer procurement procedures will be utilized in lieu of previously announced procedures for evaluating proposals from architect-engineer firms.

The "Level 3" technique provides for innovative design competition and allows GSA to evaluate several conceptual schemes. Harvell said the three highest qualified firms responding to a forthcoming announcement in the Commerce Business Daily will be submitted to develop and submit conceptual design schemes for the project. The final selection will be made by the administrator after evaluation of these submissions.

Harvell said this method will assure the selection of a firm capable of achieving design excellence while successfully managing the time and costs invested in the project.

Proposals which had previously been submitted by architect-engineer firms to GSA will be returned.

Space shuttle will have broad impact

Imagine that the year is 1492 and only one country in Europe has an ocean-going ship capable of making round trips to the New World. Consider what such a monopoly would have meant to that country.

Now consider this: The year is 1977, and only one country has a spacecraft capable of making cargo-carrying trips into space and back.

The country is the U.S., the spacecraft is our new "space shuttle," and the significance of our position is fully comparable to my hypothetical European country on the eve of Columbus' famous voyage.

We are not attempting to exploit our monopoly position for our own commercial advantage, nor would it be wise to do so, officials say. Indeed, we have invited other countries to participate in the shuttle's work. They can contribute by helping to "develop the market."

But our monopoly does give us the means to insure our military security in space, if necessary, it is being asserted.

What are the commercial possibilities? Obviously we don't know them all yet, any more than the Europeans of 1492 knew what to do with the New World. But some of the speculation is intriguing.

Because of two conditions that exist in space — zero gravity and near-perfect vacuum — certain things can be accomplished there that would be impossible, or at least extremely difficult, on earth. A common example is the perfect ball-bearing. Metal melted in space would form a perfect sphere.

It is considered doubtful that the demand for perfect ball-bearings would justify the cost of ferrying commercial quantities of steel up and down.

Other possibilities are more exciting.

Some metals that refuse to mix on earth can be alloyed in space. And extremely pure crystals can be grown there with comparative ease.

Such experimentation could lead to new developments in solid-state electronics, including improvements in the direct conversion of sunlight to electricity.

This last point is regarded as especially important, because the shuttle brings us closer to practical solar power in another way. Engineers say it is technically feasible to construct a satellite which would convert sunlight into electricity, and then send the power to earth in a microwave beam, where it would be converted for conventional commercial distribution.

The advantages of such a system are numerous: First, sunlight is much stronger in space than it is after passing through our atmosphere. Second, there are no clouds, storms, etc., to interfere with the satellite's reception (and microwaves will penetrate bad weather). Third, a satellite can be positioned to remain always in sunlight, something no point on the earth's surface is able to do.

The feasibility of such a power system would be enhanced by (a) having the means to put the satellite in orbit and keep it in repair, and (b) making improvements in the direct conversion of light to electricity. And the shuttle promises both.

Biologists, too, will have their opportunities. The unique conditions in space may permit cheaper production of certain costly medicines. Also, there is the promise of research breakthroughs here, just as in chemistry, physics and metallurgy.

On a more mundane but equally important level, the shuttle will enable Americans to do better what we are already doing in space: Vastly improved communications satellites, more detailed geological and crop surveys of the earth's surface, and better weather forecasting.

All of this will be possible because the shuttle can lift heavier, larger and more delicate equipment into orbit than the "disposable" rockets of the past.

What's it worth to us? Probably a lot more than we think right now, authorities say, adding: Remember, Manhattan Island was once reckoned to be worth $24 in beads.

Woman knocked to pavement

Mrs. Robin Schrock, 21, of 2822 Marshall Ave., was injured when she was knocked to the pavement in the 3100 block of Maryville Road at 6:30 p.m. Thursday after getting out of the auto.

She said she was preparing to close the car door and the driver left. The door knocked her to the ground and the driver apparently did not know she had been struck and drove from the scene.

Mrs. Schrock said she walked to St. Clair Avenue and then west until she lost consciousness in a yard. She was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital where she was treated and x-rayed for an abrasion to her left knee and back pain. She then was released.

Police, who had talked to her at the hospital, discovered a warrant on file charging her with contempt of court for alleged failure to pay a traffic fine, so they began searching for her.

She was arrested at 8:20 p.m. Thursday at 21st and Iowa streets and the warrant was served. She was released after posting $25 cash bond.

Crash injures 7

Seven persons were injured in a three-car chain-reaction accident in the northbound lanes of Nameoki Road at Johnson Road at 6:35 p.m. Thursday.

Witnesses said the auto of William Shable, 47, of 2941 Wayne Ave., was stopped for a red light when the auto of Caroline Simpson, 244 Hodges Ave., behind it when the auto of John Ishum, 55, of 3027 Denver St., struck the rear of the Simpson auto, pushing it into the Shable car.

Caroline Simpson was not injured, but three passengers in her auto were. Mrs. Catherine Preloger, 62, also of 244 Hodges Ave., and her sister, Mrs. Mary Rozyski, 50, of the same address, were treated and released from St. Elizabeth Hospital after bumping their heads.

Shelly Rozyski, 10, of the same address, also a passenger in Caroline Simpson's auto, suffered minor injuries which did not require hospital treatment.

Ishum was treated for a half-inch cut under his nose, a bump to his forehead and neck pains. X-rays were taken and he was released.

A passenger in Ishum's auto, Erna Roach, 52, of 4010 Braden Ave., was injured, but declined to be taken to the hospital.

Shable and a passenger in his auto, Patricia Shable, 36, also of 2941 Wayne Ave., also were hurt, but did not require hospital treatment. Keith Shable, 12, of the same address, also a passenger in the Shable's auto, escaped injury.

Satellite scanning to offer data for clean water program

The land cover in 13 south-western Illinois counties will be analyzed from computerized satellite scanning data as part of Illinois Environmental Protection Agency's clean water planning program.

The amount of agricultural land, urban areas, forest land, mining areas, wetlands and water surfaces will be tallied using LANDSAT satellite data collected in July 1976 for the following counties: Bond, Clinton, Greene, Jackson, Jersey, Macoupin, Madison, Monroe, Montgomery, Perry, Randolph, St. Clair and Washington.

IEPA has undertaken the $5,000 pilot study as part of efforts statewide to determine the extent and location of water pollution problems from broad land areas or "nonpoint sources."

"If we are concerned about water pollutants in a certain lake or stream coming from agricultural land, for example, it's important to know the number of acres of agricultural land in a watershed to estimate the amount of possible runoff," explained Dennis Pesciotti, resources planner for IEPA in charge of the Landsat study.

Scanning a 1.1 acre parcel of land from 270 miles up, the Landsat satellite records ground cover reflections. Such reflections yield information on the extent of agricultural land cover, urban or suburban development, forested (deciduous or coniferous) area, strip mined land and bare, rocky ground. Data on water bodies can show whether the waters are clear or cloudy.

Landsat cannot provide close detail of an area. Within each 11 acre parcel scanned, only the predominant land cover is shown even though others may exist. The satellite does have the potential, however, to scan vast geographic regions or entire states every 18 days, although the quality of the data depends upon the extent of haze or cloud cover.

The Landsat satellite program was launched in 1972 by the National Aeronautic and Space Administration (NASA) to collect information on natural resources. Energy development, drought, resource management, agricultural production and environmental protection are some of the areas in which Landsat data is being used by public officials to make policy decisions affecting broad land areas.

For example, current information on land development patterns is required for many urban, regional and state planning programs. Landsat data can also be used to conduct watershed inventories enabling states to foresee flood problems, drought and water supply fluctuations and to determine the location and spread of crop disease and insect infestation.

In addition, comparing data from year to year can help public officials and policy makers monitor the growth of metropolitan areas and determine its effect on water quality as general land uses change.

The 13-county area in southwestern Illinois was chosen for study as the result of a cooperative effort among IEPA, the Illinois Department of Local Government Affairs (DLGA) and Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission (SIMRPC) in Collinsville.

SIMRPC is contributing $5,000 and DLGA $6,000 to the study cost. Bendix Aerospace Products Systems Division, Ann Arbor, Mich., will analyze and interpret the Landsat data.

"We had to choose a limited area for study because of funding limits," Pesciotti commented. "However, the results will be assessed to see if it would be cost effective to do a land cover inventory of the entire state in the future."

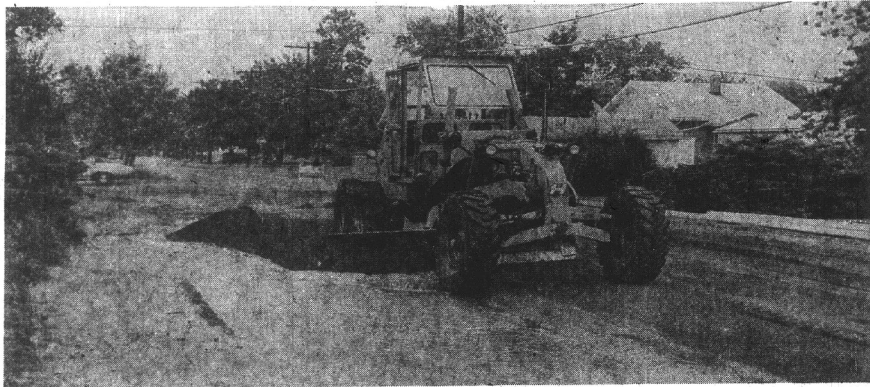

"This type of land cover inventory is much more economical than traditional studies by plane or traveling the area by car, according to Pesciotti.

"Using more conventional methods would no doubt cost several times what we are investing in the Landsat effort. Besides, by the time the information could be collected and analyzed using other methods, it probably would be outdated."

Data for the 13 counties will be mapped and tabulated by early 1978.

Percy urges 'free' Voice of America

Senator Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) said last week that President Carter has "a unique opportunity" to free Voice of America newscasts from the meddling of diplomats and bureaucrats.

In a statement issued by his office, Percy commented on reports that an options paper for reorganization of the U.S. Information Agency and the Voice of America will soon go to the President for decision.

The Senator said, "President Carter can decide now to guarantee for the Voice of America the freedom to tell the whole truth, so it can earn the credibility that we wish it to have with its foreign audiences."

Percy stated that an independent Voice of America is said to be one of the options before the President. He said that another option reportedly was to retain the Voice within the U.S. Information Agency, but to give it a Presidential guarantee of independence in its news broadcasting.

Either option, he asserted, would be "a significant step forward."

Sept. 30 deadline for crop insurance

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture, is taking applications for 1978 wheat insurance.

Farmers may avail themselves of this protection by contacting their local Federal Crop Insurance Corporation county office.

The program offers a specific production guarantee to help cover the cost of producing a crop.

In some counties the program has been changed considerably. The coverage adjustment program that was offered for the past four years has been discontinued. The coverages in these counties have been adjusted to more adequately cover the farmers cost of production. Farmers who currently have Federal Crop Insurance policies receive the improved coverages.

The final date for signing for fall wheat insurance is Sept. 30. According to Ben A. Jodan Jr., regional director for Indianapolis regional office, current participation in the program is at an all-time high in the 226 counties served by the regional office.

Early sign-up indicates that farmers are continuing to expand the use of the "all-risk" protection.

Farmers can also sign up for the 1978 spring crop program at this time if they so desire.

New Arch train schedule

The passenger transportation system in the Gateway Arch operated by the Bi-State Development Agency will operate on a revised schedule beginning Tuesday, Sept. 6, Bi-State Executive Director Robert J. Baer announced today.

The two capsule transporters, which operate through Labor Day from 8:30 a.m. until 9:30 p.m., will be in service beginning Sept. 6 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The new hours will remain in effect until the end of October. From October 31 into next spring, hours will be 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

The Arch transportation system, now in its eleventh year, has carried more than eight million visitors to the top of the 630-foot monument, Baer said.

Lance, Koreagate probed by Percy and Stevenson

By ROBERT ESTILL

Washington Bureau
Unpredictable winds of circumstance have swept Senators Charles Percy and Adlai Stevenson into the center of maelstroms here.

Stevenson, as chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, bears major responsibilities for determining if any senators fell into the spell of South Korean influence peddlers.

Percy, as ranking Republican on the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, is one of the prime probes into the tangled, personal financial affairs of Bert Lance, President Carter's director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Neither Stevenson nor Percy pushed for a center stage role in the current dramas. And neither of the Illinois senators could be accused of being overzealous in the public aspects of the investigations. Stevenson, a leader in efforts to reorganize the Senate and draft a new code of conduct, said he took on the chairmanship for two years because he "wanted to leave my mark" on the Senate.

"I look it on as a duty, a chance to implement the first strict code of conduct," Stevenson told the Press-Record.

When he accepted the chairmanship in February, he did not expect to become involved in the Korean connection.

But in April, with no allegations or complaints made against any senators, Stevenson said he decided the committee should take a look to determine if there had been any Senate involvement.

A month ago, Stevenson suggested the current crop of senators is second in integrity only to the founding fathers.

In that same Aug. 2 news conference here, Stevenson told reporters his committee had no evidence of any improper or illegal activities by any senator in connection with the Korean investigation.

Less than a week later, he examined documents obtained by Justice Department investigators looking into the affairs of South Korean businessman Tongsan Park.

He then modified his statement at a Chicago news conference, saying he could not longer say no senators were involved.

That statement was widely interpreted by the news media as a reversal of Stevenson's position, and that he is now implying something in the Justice Department's documents convinced him one or more senators is involved.

However, Stevenson told me his statement in Chicago is "not a turnaround."

He said one of the conditions of obtaining access to the Justice Department records was that he not make any public statements about them.

The senator said his committee also agreed that same day that it should not make any public statements about the committee's investigation.

The Illinois Democrat said it was because of those agreements that he told reporters in Chicago he could no longer say there are not any senators under investigation.

In effect, Stevenson not only is not naming names, he is not saying if there are any names to name.

He is saying the agreements prevent him from saying if there are or are not any Senate suspects.

Stevenson said he expects in a week to announce the hiring of additional staff personnel to complete the first step in determining if there is enough evidence to warrant a "full-fledged, quasi-judicial investigation" by his committee.

He said he does not know how long it will take to determine whether a full investigation is needed, because the committee's course will be influenced by the results of the Justice Department's investigation.

Percy is taking a closer look at Lance after being generally supportive of Mr. Carter's close ally when Lance appeared before the committee for confirmation in January and for a look into a segment of his fiscal affairs at a July 25 hearing.

Republican Percy certainly was in no danger of being accused of playing the partisan at the July 25 hearing. Indeed, he and other committee members drew criticism for being overly deferential towards Lance.

Near the midway point in the July hearing, Percy said he was "satisfied completely" with the budget chief's answers.

It was Percy who proposed that the committee turn a transcript of its hearing over to John Heilmann, the comptroller of the currency, but not continue its investigation until Heilmann concluded his.

Between that hearing and the Aug. 18 release of Heilmann's incomplete report, other questions arose about Lance's loans and overdrafts while chief executive of two Georgia banks.

When the Heilmann report was released, Percy told reporters he had questions beyond the questions which the comptroller had said were not resolved in his report.

Although Heilmann said in his report that several areas of the investigation are not concluded, both Lance and Mr. Carter are saying the report clears the budget chief.

Heilmann is to appear before the committee Sept. 7 to report on those other areas, and Lance will appear before the committee the following day to answer questions from Percy and other committee members.

Percy's position has been that the committee should rely on the comptroller to conduct the investigation.

Whether the September hearings will lead him to reaffirm his position and mark an end to the Lance affair remains to be seen.

Much progress at crossings but Rt. 162 delays continue

Major improvement of the Niedringhaus Avenue railroad crossing was authorized last month, followed by a similar breakthrough for the 20th Street crossing and continued rapid progress on an even larger undertaking — building of a vehicular grade separation structure across the 19th Street railroad tracks. And the Broadway underpass in Venice is now fully linked with the Great River Road and its Granite City and Mitchell connecting points.

While these are big advances, the problem of rough crossings, such as at Edwardsville Road south of 20th Street, continues at some locations in the Quad-Cities.

And the current project of extending four-lane Maryland Road south from Pontoon Road to link with Route 162—at times diverting normal Johnson Road and St. Clair Avenue traffic onto 162 (East 23rd Street) and Pontoon Road — has dramatized not only the need to widen Pontoon and 162 but also the dilemma posed by Route 162 railroad crossing.

Frequent long delays at the latter crossing are a substantial problem and become even more disruptive during temporary periods (such as the Maryville work) when there is extra reliance on Route 162.

With the new intersection of 162 and widened Maryland Road about to be completed only a short distance from the rail crossing, added difficulty could develop when there are long lines of train-delayed autos and trucks. The crossing at 162 will require continuing study leading to some form of corrective action.

Mopeds don't guzzle but they and rationing aren't solutions

We hope there isn't any connection between the Aug. 20 legalization of mopeds — motorized bicycles — in Illinois and Friday's disclosure that the Carter administration is rushing pell-mell toward developing legislation or administrative orders establishing gasoline rationing.

Because suburban areas are much more extensive than was the case in World War II, fuel rationing of the kind that worked reasonably well then would be chaotic now.

The travel that would be curbed would not be merely in the luxury category but also such necessities as going to work, shopping, obtaining medical care and conducting other vital activities of daily life.

Commuting in some foreign cities is done primarily on bicycles, and the 30-miles-per-hour mopeds newly authorized in this state are said to provide economical mileage of up to 150 miles to a gallon.

Power plants in sky envisioned by space shuttle planners

Press-Record Washington Bureau — When the spaceship Enterprise glided on its own to a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, it was easy to see what the space shuttle is going to mean to the U. S. space program.

The age of "splashdowns" in the ocean is over. The age of recoverable boosters and space vehicles that land like airplanes is just around the corner.

A host of space projects which might have looked too ambitious in the earlier days of rocketry may now deserve a fresh look. Capturing solar energy in space and transmitting it to earth already is getting renewed attention.

After our astronauts reached the moon in 1969, a lot of people were wondering what our space program could do for an encore. The space shuttle is a less glamorous development, but one with a tremendous potential to affect our workday world.

Treaty — only scrap of paper?

Wall Street Journal — Amid the confusing mixed signals the Carter administration put out in advance of Secretary of State Vance's current visit to China, one item caught our eye.

Peking's terms, in exchange of full ambassadors have always included the abrogation of our Mutual Defense Treaty with Taiwan.

Now, we notice, proponents of accepting the Communist terms are saying the treaty should be "allowed to lapse."

Now, this is an intriguing semantic change.

To abrogate something, you have to face up to the dastardly act itself.

It is much easier to allow something to lapse, you can just stand aside and let nature take its course.

What, we pondered, was the significance of the difference?

When does the Mutual Defense Treaty expire, we innocently asked one China expert lobbying for Peking's terms?

For that matter, just what does it take to abrogate a treaty approved by two-thirds of the Senate and thus under Article VI of the Constitution part of the Supreme Law of the Land?

There followed an excursion through the murky waters of international law, reaching such strange depths as the once-proposed Bricker Amendment, but finally discovered the Rosetta stone of the semantic shift.

The Mutual Defense Treaty, signed in 1954, provides, "This treaty shall remain in force indefinitely. Either party may terminate it one year after notice has been given to the other party."

But, a Nationalist Chinese official confides, President Carter would not take that route because it would expose him to a year of political controversy not wanting to "abrogate," he would "allow to lapse."

What this turns out to mean is that the United States of America would solemnly announce: We hereby recognize the People's Republic of China; we hereby derecognize the Republic of China; and by the way, the U. S. and the Republic of China no longer exist, it follows that any treaty obligations we happen to have had with it have also vanished from the face of the earth.

No mess, no fuss, no hand-wringing around the symbol of the Mutual Defense Treaty. The Mutual Defense Treaty would be "allowed to lapse."

It is by no means clear, we hasten to add, that the Carter administration actually plans any such thing.

Certainly, the Taiwanese are persuaded they are about to be abandoned, and have called up their Rotary clubs in the resulting lobbying.

On the other side, China scholars who advocate "normalization" have been warning their views now dominate administration thinking. But the back-headers from Washington say they aspects nothing dramatic from his mission.

The most logical explanation the one is that on this point President Carter has not quite yet been lobbied by his staff.

He insists on asking for a pledge that Peking will not use force to take over Taiwan, or at least for its agreement not to claim about continuing U.S. arms shipments to the island.

Such requests are likely to irritate the Chinese leaders, leaving them feeling they are not being taken very seriously; it is better for the U.S. to say as little as possible about the issue.

But when the Chinese refuse such positions, the President will be told he should drop them one by one.

He may yet end up swallowing the Chinese terms and pressuring Taiwan to make the best deal it can with the

Road, bridge funding in jeopardy

(Third of three articles on Gov. James R. Thompson)

Question: What about energy? Illinois is an energy state — and you've just returned from Washington, where you met with the President and his staff to discuss energy. What did you tell them?

Thompson: Well, there are broad concerns, and there are specific parochial state concerns. I agree with the President: There is an energy crisis.

It's real and it's going to come upon us.

Our economy is far too dependent on petroleum and on foreign petroleum, and on that the price is going up whether by taxation or the will of the Arabs; one or the other.

By the middle of the next decade, we're going to have a disaster unless we do something now, and so I think the President's right in moving forward.

But I'm not satisfied that his program contains enough production initiatives, and I think Congress will have a great deal to say about that.

I think the Ad Hoc Committee on energy in the House is one that will be responsive to the needs of the nation.

One of our ranking Illinois congressmen, John Anderson, is a member of that committee, and I rely heavily on him for advice and for input into the ad hoc committee.

But even there, I work in a bipartisan fashion.

I work very closely with Congressman Rostenkowski, Congressman Yates, Congressman Michel — both sides of the aisle — and I think it's a Democratic Congress and I recognize that.

I have some concerns as governor.

The more gasoline we conserve — and we should — the more the motor fuel tax revenues to the states will decline because they are a flat-rate, cents-per-gallon tax in most states.

And yet, the cost of highway construction and maintenance is going up.

Our road system in Illinois and across the nation is about 30 to 40 years old and, in the case of most primary roads and bridges, they're falling apart.

Some people don't understand — and some people in the White House did not understand at the beginning of the energy program.

I don't really blame them because, unless you've had experience as a state chief executive or in the highway department somewhere and you're focusing on energy, you can't understand all the ramifications.

What must be understood is that if we were to cut out most of America's pleasure driving tomorrow as a conservation goal, you still would need the same road and bridge system to support our economy.

We're extraordinarily truck-oriented. Trucks tear up the railroad or to the barge line. You need trucks to get raw materials into the factories; trucks to take products out of the factories into the stores in thousands of towns across Illinois.

You need roads and bridges to get school kids to school in rural areas, and in suburban areas to get people to work; to get people to town to shop.

You can't close up your road and bridge system.

And yet that's what will happen to us unless the federal government gives us a portion of the energy tax windfall that it will derive from the imposition of a wellhead tax or standby tax or whatever the final product.

Q. So you believe that rebates to the states are a more appropriate use of energy tax revenues than are social welfare programs or other areas not related to energy?

Thompson: Well, I'm a pragmatist. I know the Administration wants to hand back money in terms of income tax refunds, although I think many people will use that to buy more expensive gasoline, so it may be self-defeating.

I recognize the diversity of opinion in Congress, so the proposal I made to the President's energy advisers was a simple, pragmatic compromise proposal.

I said that if you're going to have the wellhead tax and if you want to devote the first $2.7 billion of that to income tax refunds — as the House Ways and Means Committee apparently has decided to do for the first year — that's fine.

Just stretch that out, and since you've given your $2.7 billion in income tax refunds, give us in the states — all 50 states — the next $2.5 billion, which is approximately 25 percent of the remainder, and use the other 75 percent to do with what you want.

Balance the budget, promote energy research and development in coal and in mass transit policies with 75 percent, but take 25 percent of that remainder and give it to the states.

That would work out under the established formulas for distribution of highway funds to a subsidy to a state like Illinois about $115 million a year.

All we've asked for is the difference between the two percent growth rate in motor fuel tax funds we are now anticipating which is based on the pre-OPEC days of a five percent annual growth rate in motor fuel tax funds, and 6, which we'd get under the President's program if it were successful.

So we're not asking for anything extra. We just want to be saved from catastrophe and the price, I think, is a small one. Congress is sympathetic to it and willing to pay it.

I'm going to be back down on Capitol Hill on both sides of the aisle to push this proposal.

I hope my fellow governors will, too, because otherwise they're going to wake up and find themselves without any highways and bridges.

Q. Turning to politics, governor, how do you view the state of the Republican Party?

Thompson: Well, we have to do a number of things and do them at once. No one thing will save or revive the party.

We live and die by the presidential election. Granted, it's important.

It's the most important office in the nation. It impacts on our lives every day.

But to say that a political party flowers when it wins the Presidency and dies when it doesn't is nonsense.

The Democratic Party has demonstrated that over and over again.

While we live and die by the Presidency, there are things we can do on electing the Congress, the governors, the statehouses, the courthouses.

That's the first thing we have to do.

Secondly, we have to take Congress district by district and find the best and most attractive candidates we can and start taking some of those seats back.

The majorities are simply too lopsided.

We've demonstrated in Illinois that when the majorities are not lopsided you can accomplish things.

You can persuade people of the other party to vote for your proposals some of the time.

Some southern Democrats are like Republicans in terms of philosophy and they can be picked off, but not when the gap is 2 to 1. That's just impossible to overcome in most instances.

Thirdly, we have to appeal to more people, and that doesn't mean we have to run out and lead 1,000 blacks and 1,000 Hispanics and 1,000 women and set them into the Republican Party and say, "Here, we fulfilled our duty."

It means we have to demonstrate a concern with issues which concern them.

Dick Snelling (Republican governor of Vermont) put it well. I think when he spoke to the Republican Governors Association shortly after we both were elected:

If you speak to people's concerns, they follow you into the party.

It's not a matter of dragging them into the party and then finding out what their concerns are. It's the other way around.

That means not defining Republican principles in such parrot, historical fashions that you have bound yourself up to what the Republican Party was a century ago.

We're not living a century ago. We're living now.

If you want to live a century ago, go to the McKinley-Roosevelt campaign button and find out what the Republican program was that year — employment for labor, full dinner bucket, sound money, prosperity.

If you want to revive century-old slogans, let's start with those.

But the Republican Party is perceived among these days and we're often on the wrong side of issues.

We too often identify with — if you can define it as such — corporate boardroom interest rather than corporate interests as a whole.

A corporation is more than a board of directors. It's the employees. It's the consumers. It's the customers. It's the shareholders who may be senior citizens, working people.

You've got to be willing to be pragmatic and to admit the differences in the Republican Party.

A Republican who runs for office out in Arizona has got different problems than a Republican who runs in Manhattan, and we ought to face that and not be ashamed of that.

Women's job status affected by demand and discrimination

(U.S. Department of Labor)

The majority of women remain active in the workforce because of insufficient demand for their labor and because discriminatory barriers diminish their desire or ability to work.

In a review of women and work, a Department of Labor research study has found that the supply of women workers responds quickly to changes in demand within specific occupations and industries.

As a consequence, the study says, qualified women candidates have been found often with the aid of outreach and some training — for openings in traditionally male occupations. Examples: skilled trades, engineering, police, military, various technical jobs, management.

The study finds that when the demand barriers to these occupations are removed or labor shortages, the flow of qualified women into them proceeds "with amazing speed."

Following are some of the observations made in the study:

—Increasing the general demand for women (through full employment) and improving the employability of women through education and training are not enough to overcome discrimination and job disadvantages.

—Under conditions of increased demand for workers, employers often divert their hiring of women to the so-called secondary sector — poor jobs offering low wages and benefits, poor working conditions, job insecurity, few chances for advancement and arbitrary supervision.

Both education and discrimination have important effects on the work women do. It was found that women with the same education levels as men tend to have a markedly lower job status.

—Women's occupations derive not from innate aptitudes but from stereotyped roles and from long traditions of dominance and subservience "which a democratic society is necessarily committed to eliminate."

—The study of grading, upgrading, and other employer practices should be directed especially at employers in high-wage industries, where the greatest opportunities for women presumably exist.

—Women's earnings suffer because they remain confined, steadily, able-workers, even when wage and promotional incentives are low.

Group wants 4¢ waterway fuel tax

To the Editor:

After discussing it in detail with members of this national committee and members of the House of Representatives, it is my firm opinion that the best possible approach to support a fuel tax of four cents a gallon.

It is a minimal. It is infinitely fairer than Senator Pete Domenici's approach. And it appears to be the solution that is viewed as most palatable by shippers, farmers, barge operators and members of Congress.

The Domenici approach would authorize $421 million for construction of a new Locks and Dam 22 at Alton on the Mississippi River.

It would give the Transportation Secretary 18 months to devise a waterway user charge system.

Congressman Al Ullman (D. Ore.), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, asked that action on HR 824, a river and harbor authorization bill, be delayed pending determination of the user fee as a tax and under his jurisdiction.

To force the Constitutional issue would delay a user fee, but, in my opinion, only temporarily.

It would also delay Locks and Dam 22 and play into the hands of the Transportation Department's proposed 18-month engineering study. This could result in even further delays, as well as even more substantial user fees.

The earlier fight to separate the user fee and construction issues appears lost. President Carter has said he will veto the Alton project if it reaches him without user fees.

Even our strongest allies in Congress are telling us clearly that separation is impossible. They, too, are saying, "No user charge, no Locks and Dam 22."

Compared to the Domenici user fee proposal, a four-cent-a-gallon plan by Rep. Bill Faxon (R-Minn.) has these major advantages:

1. It is fairer and more equitable.
2. It doesn't discriminate against short or long-haul shippers.
3. It is much easier to administer, and thus there would be a bigger return to the federal government of each dollar collected.
4. It doesn't discriminate against high-value commodities, such as soybeans, steel, etc., as the Domenici approach does.
5. Four cents per gallon is an amount consistent with the federal fuel tax that truckers and pleasure boaters now pay. Railroads pay nothing.
6. The revenue collected from the four-cent fuel tax on the inland waterway system would be $25 million, based on current diesel fuel usage. Domenici's proposal would collect upwards of $400 million each year.

Too strict health standards in hiring

To the Editor:

It would like us to know what a person is supposed to do after working 16 years at an industry and it closes down.

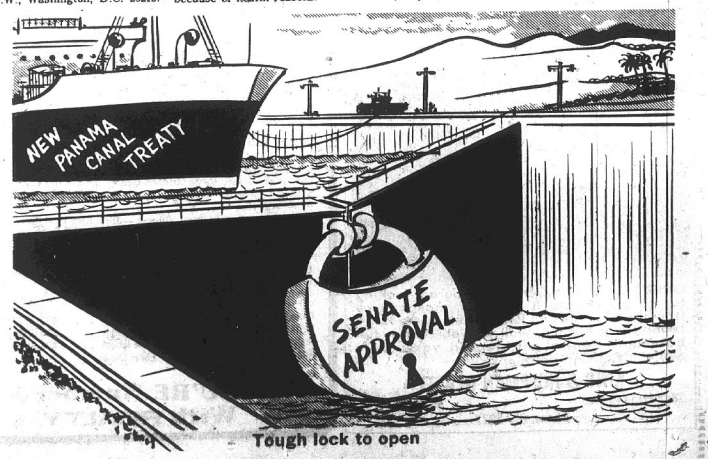

When you go to another industry, they turn you down because of health reasons.

After 16 years of doing any kind of work that came along and being only 39 years old and not having any back trouble, how can a person turn you down?

If you're fit to work 16 years for one, why not the other?

The National Labor Relations Board and other parts of the federal government should start investigating matters such as this.
